16	～	30

With a long rousing cry of "Gooooooooood Mooooorning Tooooookyoooooooooooo!" Jon Kabira launches into his weekly radio show "(1)JK Radio — Tokyo United" every Friday at 6 a.m. on J-Wave, a Tokyo-based FM station popular across the Kanto region.

Delivering cheer with his timechecks on even the grimmest winter morning, the veteran bilingual DJ (or "navigator" in J-Wave parlance) has long been part of life for his many listeners — boosting their spirits as they wake up, get dressed, prepare breakfast and set off on their daily adventures.

(2) the Okinawa native's radio career synchronizes precisely with that of J-Wave — Tokyo's second-oldest commercial FM station (after Tokyo FM), which hit the airwaves 25 years ago with its slogan, "The Best Music On The Planet." At 5 a.m. on Oct. 1, 1988, it was Kabira's voice that listeners first heard in English delivering an official statement to launch the station after a few months of test broadcasts.

Two days later, at 7 a.m., as Kabira kicked off the first of the "Tokio Today" weekday-morning music/talk shows he was to helm for close to (3)two decades, listeners heard the same jaunty words — followed by the then global synthpop hit "Always on My Mind," by the English duo (4)Pet Shop Boys.

Though Kabira's radio presence is now down to one 5½-hour show each week, at 54 he is also a popular fixture on the small screen, where he currently hosts the 50-minute "Prime Show" entertainment program on Wowow every weekday evening.

(5) his friendly voice, the ease with which he speaks Japanese and English and his good looks, Kabira is remarkable for the way he manages to pack a wealth of information and witty commentary into even the briefest of interviews he does with a wide range of international newsmakers and trendsetters. He achieves this feat by almost simultaneously translating his English-language interviews into flawless Japanese — while at the same time nailing his subjects with short but incisive questions.

The people he talks to and the topics he covers are astonishingly diverse — from Twitter cofounder Biz Stone to a U.K.-based importer of Japanese kigurumi mascot costumes and — as he recently featured live on "Prime Show" — a Thai documentary filmmaker whose latest work was banned there because of its antigovernment tilt.

As popular as he is as an entertainment, arts and culture commentator on TV — on top of his frequent appearances as a sports commentator, especially for soccer — Kabira's greatest media passion is reserved for radio, which he says is much more "personal" than TV. And as this is the 25th anniversary of the launch of J-Wave, he has a lot to share about his radio career, as well as the history and the future of that medium in Japan.

Despite (7), Kabira, looking a lot younger than his years, recently took time out for an interview with The Japan Times. During our hour-long chat —entirely in English — he also talked about his often stressful bilingual, bicultural upbringing in Okinawa during the postwar U.S. Occupation that lasted until 1972. As well, he delved into his time working as a "middleman" for a major music-business company — including negotiating (in vain) to have a Bruce Springsteen key chain made.
